LIVING

IN PEAK CONDITION

The best Alpine destinations this winter offer far more than just fresh powder, says Hayley Maitland

THE JET-SET FAVOURITE

This winter, swap Courchevel for Megève, the medieval French village dubbed the 'Aspen of France' by its devoted fans. Launched with the Rothschilds last year, the Four Seasons (below), on the Mont d'Arbois slopes, is a masterclass in Alpine luxury. The classic timber-and-stone property has a wine cellar of more than 10,000 bottles, helicopters for transfers to remote slopes, and the Baroness de Rothschild's art collection. Best of all? Traditional horse-drawn carriages ferry guests to the lifts, which have recently undergone major renovation.

THE WELLNESS RETREAT

Perched high above Lake Lucerne, Bürgenstock (above) has played host to the great and good since 1873. Audrey Hepburn was married at the Swiss retreat in 1954, while Sophia Loren was resident for years. Last season, it relaunched after a £440m refurb. Catch a vintage funicular up to a lavish suite before heading to one of three on-site spas. Treatments include hot stone massages with Alpine rocks and saline baths with panoramic lake views.

THE APRÈS-SKI HOTSPOT

The Experimental Group has a reputation for creating delightful boltholes around the world. This year, it launches its first ski chalet in Verbier, featuring 39 rooms with traditional wood panelling and Viennese textiles. Start your après-ski at the on-site cocktail bar before heading to legendary nightclub The Farm, which the group has also taken over.

THE GASTRO DESTINATION

The Italian Dolomites boast limestone peaks, quaint wooden chalets and more Michelin stars than any other area of the country. Base yourself at San Cassiano's Hotel Rosa Alpina, a favourite of George Clooney. Its restaurant St Hubertus – which works exclusively with local mountain ingredients – was recently awarded a third star for its exquisite Austrian-influenced dishes (above).

HIGH ART

There's no shortage of world-class art in the Alps. Plan your next ski break around the following:

NOMAD ST MORITZ

Previously held at Karl Lagerfeld's former home in Monaco, Nomad's travelling showcase – celebrating contemporary design – takes up residence at a 16th-century Alpine mansion near St Moritz in February. Nomad-circle.com

MUZEUUM SUSCH

Opening in January on an ancient pilgrim route to Santiago de Compostela, Muzeum Susch in Engadin, Switzerland, will display works by giants of contemporary art, such as Yayoi Kusama and Olafur Eliasson. Muzeumsusch.ch

TARASP CASTLE

Make a pilgrimage to Tarasp Castle, an 11th-century Swiss fortress that's just been converted into a gallery by artist Not Vital. Currently on display? Art by Alighiero Boetti and Rirkrit Tiravanija. Schloss-tarasp.ch
